Supporting autistic learners returning to SECONDARY SCHOOL

This resource is intended to support and guide anticipatory planning for autistic learners returning to school. Content is informed by evidence, consultation and experience and is likely to be relevant for children and young people with a range of neurodevelopmental needs, acknowledging that support should not be dependent on diagnostic labels.

Getting it right for every child requires the team around the child to take an individualised approach to planning. This guidance seeks to inform professionals working in schools, and those supporting school staff, of the range of concerns that may arise for an individual learner and to suggest appropriate steps to take in addressing these concerns.

Support will necessarily be very different for children at different developmental stages, e.g. you would not write a Social Story about returning to school for a child who is without the language to understand and utilise such a tool. For this reason, we have divided this document into three developmental stages:

- Social partners: children and young people who have fewer than 10 meaningful words
- Language partners: children and young people who use phrase speech
- Conversation partners: children and young people who communicate in sentences across several turns

For all autistic learners returning to secondary school the following Key Messages are relevant:

1. Ensure adjustments are anticipatory
2. Listen to parents
3. Provide predictability
4. Use visual supports
5. Provide a Safe Space
6. Plan for movement breaks
7. Seek to understand distressed behaviour
8. Identify two key adults in school
